

Excuses parents give for not insisting on financial education for their children©

- Our children have such busy schedules that it's tough to find time to incorporate money matters and effective financial practices into their lives
- My child's only fourteen (14). She doesn't need to know about money at that age
- Saving and investing are really a hassle as the small return won't meet our needs or expectations
- I don't have time to work on a budget or a plan; we're just trying to make it through the day
- Giving my children a credit card in high school will teach them financial responsibility
- Our children will do as we say because they trust and respect us
- I have nothing saved for me as I'm using all my extra money for my kid's education so they can be better prepared to succeed in life
- I can't say no to my children
- That's what I'm here for -- to make sure my children get a college education
- You shouldn't make them work while attending college. They need time to be with friends and enjoy the "college experience"

"Debt-Free Degree or a Debtor's Burden?"

by Charles R. Green M.S.Ed.